Customer Reviews
Zero Resistance Selling is a process that must be honed, just as you would hone your public speaking skills, or any other skills that are part of your self-definition. And to master your sells closure, that is, being influential, even in the most adversarial situations, here are 10 tenets to follow: 1. Show No Fear This does not mean avoid or deny it. Recognize it, process it, and choose to breath your way to being confident. See fear as you inner self telling you that you are about to stretch your self-definition, in the face of others, and that there will be resistance. Read, "Fear of Flying," by Erica Jong.
2. Believe in the Value of What You Are SellingIt's not the sell that you are after. It's the benefits that you are bringing to your buyer. It is also the ability to be influential. Read "People Power," by Donna Fisher.
3. Use Your Errors To Your AdvantagesRemember, a mistake is not your entire identity - it's a sign of where you can enhance your inner self-image.
4. Use Power PhrasesAn example is, "Here's how we'll get started." Read "Verbal Judo," by George Thompson, Ph.D.
5. Desire to Close Sales Means More Than Anything ElseYou don't have to like the person. You are there to influence change in that person's life.
6. Take Objections as "No Big Deal"The stronger the objection, the more your prospect is giving you, about him or her. Use this to compassionately respond to his or her needs. Stay in the moment. Take your time. And show your prospect that he or she matters. Read, "Honoring the Self," by Nathaniel Branden, Ph.D.
