This audiobook chronicles the shocking and appalling story of the handsome, popular, and energetic sixth-grade teacher in a Caseyville, Illinois, elementary school, who was accused of sexually abusing numerous young girls.

I moved to the town of Caseyville, IL right after this happened. I didn’t catch much of the news at the age of 12/13, so don’t recall the story. I came across the book at a grocery store. I love true crime. Do I like what they do, NO. The brain that they have, or don’t have, it’s just amazing how somebody can do such a thing.

Okay back to this book. I started reading the back of it and all I saw was Caseyville, IL on it. Okay for those of you unaware of Caseyville, at the time of this, you blinked you have missed the town. It was a neat town though. We had a little convient store, a barber shop, a drug store, a gas/service station, a few churches, an ice cream shop, that was a little walk and some other bussines. We had the school a Police Dept and the Library at that time was attached to the Police dept. You had to go in their door and go upstaris. Even though we had a nice time, I always felt unwelcome, really unwelcome. Not many people talked. But we had a clan of us and we pretty much stuck together. I noticed though the Junior High we attended never accepted ANY of the girls for stuff. Like cheerleading, never saw a Caseyville girl in there, even the ones that had been cheerleaders since first grade. Some I understood why they weren’t chosen, but others should have been, over ones that were. I figured there was a reason just wasn’t sure. We wound up moving again and life goes on. On April 3rd of 1994 I read the back of this book and noticed Caseyville, and well, had to read it. Holy Cow, it explained to me all these years later, why the town was they way they were. The scary part of that book was knowing who some of the girls were by reading about them and realising I could have been one of them. For some reason my parents delayed on our move.
